Ludwig van Beethoven's Cello Sonata No. 2 in G Major, Op. 5, No. 2 is a beloved work in the cello repertoire. Written in 1796, it is one of Beethoven's earliest cello sonatas, and it showcases his mastery of the form. The sonata is in three movements:

1. Allegro
2. Adagio
3. Rondo: Allegro

The first movement is characterized by its energetic and rhythmic drive. The second movement is a beautiful and lyrical adagio, while the third movement is a lively and virtuosic rondo.

Analysis

The first movement of the cello sonata is in sonata form. The exposition begins with the main theme, a vigorous and rhythmic melody in G major. The second theme is a more lyrical melody in D major. The development section is based on material from both themes, and it is full of dramatic contrasts. The recapitulation brings back the main theme in G major, and the movement ends with a brilliant coda.

The second movement is in ternary form. The main theme is a beautiful and lyrical melody in G major. The middle section is a contrasting section in D minor, and it is based on a more somber and introspective melody. The main theme returns in the third section, and the movement ends with a peaceful and tranquil coda.

The third movement is in rondo form. The main theme is a lively and virtuosic melody in G major. The contrasting episodes are in D major and B minor, and they provide a nice contrast to the main theme. The movement ends with a brilliant coda that brings back the main theme in G major.
