The Journey Begins

Mozart's journey commenced in Vienna, the heart of the Austrian Empire. Accompanied by his librettist, Lorenzo Da Ponte, he traversed the picturesque countryside, passing through lush forests, rolling hills, and charming villages. The journey was a time for contemplation and inspiration, as Mozart sketched musical ideas and Da Ponte composed lyrical verses.

Arrival in Prague

Upon arriving in Prague, Mozart and Da Ponte were greeted with great enthusiasm. The city was abuzz with anticipation for the premiere of "Don Giovanni," a masterpiece that would redefine opera for generations to come. The opera's themes of love, betrayal, and revenge resonated deeply with the Czech audience, who embraced Mozart and his music as one of their own.

Mozart's Prague Symphony

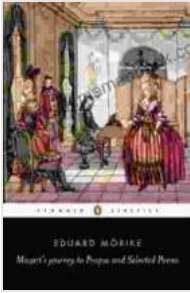

In addition to "Don Giovanni," Mozart composed another profound work during his stay in Prague: the Symphony No. 38 in D major, popularly known as the "Prague" Symphony. This symphony is a testament to Mozart's mastery of musical form and melodic invention. Its lively rhythms, vibrant harmonies, and energetic counterpoint showcase Mozart's brilliance at its peak.

Selected Poems Inspired by the Journey
